If you play online, you'll be lagging the shit out of everyone if you play on high settings. Maybe the FPS lag doesn't bother you when you play single player but it will bother you and everyone else in your game on multiplayer.

I have a dual core 1800 Ghz, 2 gigs of RAM and a Geforce 7600 video card which, granted, ain't the greatest but is at least double as good as what our friend here describes and had to put my settings to medium to avoid any FPS drops.

Of course you can play on high, everyone with minimum system requirements can put his settings to high and it'll "run". It just won't run at the speed it should.

Your PC may not physically be 4 years old, but the specs you posted are.
