Well, I'm not too familiar with your system, but in quite a few cases, politicians in ours will give up their 'seat' when they make a run for prime minister, head to the senate, or get involved with crown corporations.

I just see it as a way for her to travel, and meet n' greet people in her party, build connections, and build up momentum in the grassroots.

On the other hand, maybe she was just really soured by the whole experience after the last election, and wanted out. We probably won't know until the campaigning for 2012 ramps up.
