
Subject: U.S. Army Special Forces
Posted by Javaxcx on Sat, 08 Mar 2003 22:05:45 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Sir PhoenixxJavaxcxMy advice?
Come up here to Canada. Our Military Owns j00. =)

LOL
That is so funny!

Canada has one of the smallest, and weakest military/army/airforce/etc.

They can only afford those dinky little aircraft carriers that can only launch helo's and harriers. lol...
(I only seen maybe 1 full size carrier, wouldn't give them that much credit)

Rather than be a belligerent little child, I'm not going to point of the many problems with the American or British Military forces.

Someone in this thread said: "We have what we need." Being a peacekeeping nation, our Military is almost 100% devoted to the UN. Why else would we need it? We're not war-mongers.

I'm proud to be able to say "I am Canadian", and also be a part of our Air Force as of next year. Currently, I am working with the Reserves, and will soon be either one of two things:

- 1) Going to school at RMC, finishing in my 4th year with my Commission, and 2nd Leftenant.
- 2) Move up north to CFB Borden and enlist as an Air Reserve until I get into RMC.

Remember, it's not the size of your Army, it's how you use it. And as far as Canada goes, we're using it for all the right reasons based on the actions of the UN.
