Chew wrote on Mon, 21 September 2009 05:34Lol, I am not actually a part of any community atm... tbh, lately I have been playing in a lot of servers, mostly jelly. Sadly I even played in n00bstories for a lil bit the other day... The only reason I made the topic about the word filter was because that was complete BS to be on a forums that is supposed to bring all of the Renegade community together.

I know this will never happen, but I think there should be a list of links to ALL Renegade related websites, rather they be for servers, skins, or anything else. How can this be the public forums if it is obviously biased to certain communities and people.

Sadly, after all the "PR" Crimson has done with different groups, you'd think she'd be a lil bit better at it.
Personally I don't think Crimson herself is the problem really. The problem is more that she doesn't communicate with people, or not in a way that allows constructive ideas which are not fully in the line with Crimson's ideas.

In an ideal world the Renegade Forums would have a board of directors (say 3 or 5 people) which would've been chosen by the users of the forums. They would set up the rules, policies and would suggest people for moderatorship.
Before someone can become a moderator, the users should have to agree, and the users should also be able to suggest other people for moderatorship.
Moderators shouldn't have any power besides what they have to. This would mean that they would also be bound to the rules as agreed by the users.

In such world it would hardly be impossible to be unhappy with how Renegadeforums is run. Also it would be impossible to say that anyone of the directors or other important persons is abusing their powers. This should enable Renegadeforums to be truely THE forum for ALL communities, even if some of them may disagree with others.