That is almost as bad as when you get of those phone calls that go something like: "Our records show that you are paying high interest on your credit card, this is a last chance to change that..."

Yeah great, but they always forget to mention whose credit card they want to steal, so I assume that they mean my cats credit card! Or maybe they mean the one that my doorknob uses! you never know.

Also, I have been receiving some random friend requests on MSN messenger, but I made a rule about those: I ask them a question and if they don't respond within 10 minutes, they get deleted and blocked forever.
