I was away from ren for ages, I come back and start playing on n00bless where I was a moderator once (until Hex threw a hissy fit because of something I said). I notice a few people getting odd weapons and shit but I dont think much of it. I mean, a sbh with a volt autorifle? Not likely, but possible.

Anyway it was later brought to my attention that certain moderators and people who contribute financially towards the server(s) were being given certain privies. For starters, they get 30% discounts on all purchases at the PT. This is regardless of promotion level (I think you can get upto 15% discount by being promoted). Anyways, also, they can use exclusive commands to get free weapons and vehicles, and god knows what else (I don't even want to know).

What really amazes me is that some people at n00bless actually think this is acceptable, and make a feeble attempt to defend Hex. If you ask me, this is essentially cheating, and it is a tad ironic for mods to be using these commands when their job is to remove cheaters. IMO Anyone who impliments or uses such commands is a fucking scumbag and not worthy of moderating or administering a server.

I also know that I am not the only person to feel this way. Several people at n00bless are sick of those commands but are too shit scared to say anything. I think that the public has a right to know about this, I don't anticipate this is something that Hex would spread widely. I mean, he always seems to have some comeback to everything, but not this. Thus far he seems to be completely avoiding the issue.

So if he will not discuss it, I shall discuss it with the wider renegade community. What are your thoughts? Am I just over reacting? or is this truely a new low?

vent over.
