I'll admit I do my fair share of shitposting, but usually only in threads where there's nothing much to add with intelligent discussion, and it's better to lighten it up a little.

If a serious discussion rolls by, I'm more than capable of helping people out. Not to mention, I actually do stop by the modding forums from time to time to help people out/give criticism (even if it's in a "mean" way... but then, y'know, if everyone was nice about things that looked like shit, they'd never wanna make anything better).

I'm pretty sure some people actually come here because of the community sometimes. Because despite the fact that it's such an old game, we have such a community that still finds time to talk about whatever comes to mind. I don't know of any other games that have such a community.

To be honest, the worst of the trolls are usually people like troopr02 and on usually rocko (though some of his posts are atleast somewhat funny, although rarely), as well as a few others. The rest, I wouldn't go so far as to say they're outright trolls.
