Is it just me? OK, Apple released the iPad on April 3rd and who knows how many people went and bought them? Now, a new upgraded version is coming out on the 30th? wtf is this practice? Somebody fill me in!

It's not an upgraded iPad, it's exactly the same but with a 3G chip in it that takes MicroSIM cards.

It's like having a car, and then the manufactureres release the same car but with built-in satnav and a turbocharger for <currency>XXX more a few days later. It just took them longer to fit the parts.

It also gives the manufacturers a group of paying, 'bug-testers' that can point out any flaws in day-to-day use.
