GEORGE ZIMMER wrote on Mon, 10 May 2010 23:26 I've never really been a fan of "hardcore" stuff. It just never fit me.

Since you seem to know more about electronic music than myself, what genre would you say this falls under?

Cuz if you could make a mix with similar music, that'd be fantastic.

That's electro. I guess you'll like daft punk and darude and such as well.

Btw, Daft punk - Around the world vid clip is taken in one shot, no special effects o.0

Edit:

@Di3HardNL: I've heard better, nofi, but the bpm changes too much in not so fluent ways. Also, I got the feeling the volume changes. This might be because of the source tracks you used, but I found it to be annoying. One more thing that disturbs me as well, for hardcore there are too many breakdowns. While I can see why you did that in this case (it being a fanmix, you probably wanted to have a lot of tracks in it, right?) I feel it doesn't do the music justice.

Besides these pretty smaal things I think you mixed it in quite well, chosen the right moments and such.

Oh, one more thing, if you want to be correct, this isn't Gabber, no way.

Sorry, have listed enough of this music myself a few years back. Although I gotta admit that I was at Headhunters the 5th of may. I also visited DefQon1 in 2008.

The latest big epic thing I went to was probably Ministry of Sound New Years Evening in the O2 Arena in London. I recently started to go more to local (techno) events. I prefer the smaller rooms, and not having to fight your way through 100's of people when you go to get a drink or have to pee.
