There goes the full-size stormtrooper outfits, then. Those are good for fancy dress parties.

Still it's a good non-discriminative measure to ban things like Burqa's. Also, it would of course only apply to public area's, so inside convention centers you could still run around in your burqastormtrooper costume.

Also, this rule could be posed as safety measure and I guess it would not interfere with the US constitution as such. If it does then I'm unsure why Bush was able to torture people and pass more ridiculous laws.
