If your sister is going to fuck around with older guys then she's going to fuck around with older guys. Deal with it, she sucks but there isn't a damned thing you can do about it.

fixed.

Hey! You're clever. No really, you're pretty cool.

It is my futile wish that respect was something owed in topics such as this where I need to discuss something of importance; and 99% of people here have given me that. Yea it's the internet; and yea it's not your problem. But it matters to me. There are a lot of intelligent members here who can and have offered me good advice. Then there are people like you who have the potential to help; yet say stupid shit like that; and for what? Does it make you feel better? Maybe being an anonymous ignorant prick helps fill up your quota for daily entertainment.

I'm all for your jokes, there just a time and a topic mate.

I've read everyone's comments and I'd like to say - thanks for your advice. I wouldn't of made this topic if I did not have a lack of intelligent people to talk to this about IRL. This is just not something I want to discuss with %99 of friends; and I guess the anonymity helps as well.

What advice is there to give? How can I, a random person on the renegadeforum you know nothing about, change your attitude towards a fairly fundamental issue? I sure as hell won't change your mind.

So, who exactly are you thanking for their advice? The people who actually criticized what you did, or the fundies giving you a pat on the back, thinking you were morally upright when you were really just patronising your sister?

Like I said, I thanked everyone for their advice. While appearances may be deceiving; I'm not so self consumed as to only acknowledge people who didn't criticize me. Upon reading everyone's opinions, I do realize that yea, the way I went about it was wrong.

If I am honestly seeking opinions, then anybody has the ability to change my mind (I'm already thinking of how I can apologize). - Yet anyone can not possibly know my true intentions, so I won't hold that against you.
