I see what you mean by the random zooming starting at about 4:50 minutes into the video. Most of the time it wasn't a problem -- could still read the text and follow your actions fine. Sometimes it was even helpful that it zoomed in.

The VisualStudio stuff was interesting to see. Watching that part of the video could help be an icebreaker to learn how to really do some programming for Renegade.

Having no voices for the video was fine with me, for this kind of tutorial video, being able to read the comments/explanations on the screen rather than hearing it was very helpful. I'm not sure how much I would have understood if it was through voice. Nevertheless, any kind of video like this is pretty helpful for the community.

Keep the good work up. =) Hope to see some more.
