I love both MW2 and BlackOps. They both have their strong and weakpoints, but they're certainly not bad games imo. I do think there should be some new innovations in the next COD installment though.

Go to almost any gamestore, ask for MW2 and you'll get ripped of for 45+ euros...

The game should cost about 20 or maybe even 15 now. Apparently, they don't care about the people playing their games, but only about their wallets. If they really did care about the people, they'd lower the prices big time so EVERYONE should be able to buy a copy of the game.

People still buy it at that price so why lower it? It's a part of business... sorry the world doesn't work like that ... money talks retard.
