

---

Subject: Re: All I want for Christmas...

Posted by Prulez on Mon, 20 Dec 2010 21:35:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

danpaul88 wrote on Mon, 20 December 2010 19:07

Personally I enjoy holidays to places with a lot of culture to explore and history to observe, or activity based holidays such as Center Parcs in the UK. Never been a fan of going on holiday to sit and do nothing whilst cooking in the sun, seems like a waste of time to me, but everyone has their own preferences.

This thread is now also about holiday preferences.

I, for one, prefer sitting down, cooking in the sun, having a cold drink, and so on. While I value seeing some culture and history, my opinion that I'm busy with my education (work for others) for god knows howmany days, weeks, and so on. Our traditional lifes are repetitive, so when I'm not having my regular schedule, I'd appreciate 2 weeks of doing absolutely nothing and chilling out, while not having to worry about anything..

I'm not a fan of having schedules and so on on holidays.. I know of families that get up at like 5 o'clock in the morning to get in the bus at 6 o'clock, go sightseeing the entire day, get back at, say, 8 o'clock in the afternoon, have dinner, have a drink or 3 at a bar, then sleep. While I appreciate doing that once or twice during my holiday, I can't be bothered to do that, say, 5 times on a 2 week holiday. (And yes; I know families who do so).

Last summer holiday I met this family who had their "Day meeting" every evening, where they'd discuss what they would do the next day, schedule all that shit, and so on. For me, personally, that's not a holiday at all. Like I described in the first paragraph; I'd just like to sit down, relax, not worry about anything.

On-topic: Take your time, enjoy your holidays, and get a good product out there. (But don't let us wait for another year; Renegade may be dead by then)

---