So it turns out we're running terribly low on IPv4 combinations, and the port to IPv6 is on the way. What's going to happen to the Renegade servers?

I presume that the FDS wasn't programmed to compensate for IPv6 connections, and once ISP's port over (mid-late 2012) that's what everyone will be using to connect.

I assume common bots, like Brenbot and NightRegulator (maybe) will probably be ported over to use them, but they just just run alongside the FDS don't they? Are we planning to release Scripts 4.0 with a new server version to compensate for that? What about the older, less popular servers that don't keep up to date?

What do you think about the whole idea?
