I prefer Physical copies to be honest but I will buy digital copies if the game goes on sale for dirt cheap (Steam & Games for Windows Marketplace ftw), if they happen to be the same price, I would just go for the physical copy.

I don't have many worries about cds or dvds getting scratched since whenever I get a new physical copy of a game, I will make an iso of it and use that and then store the physical copy of it somewhere. I know that does sound like the same sort of thing with digital copies with the exception of not having to download anything (my connections sucks x_x) and I always have it.

Having said that though, the last physical game I have bought was Starcraft 2 (I pre-ordered it).

PS. Oh and as for the Consoles thing... Microsoft (I think that's who it was) has said that they can get 5 more years (or something like that) out of the 360.
