Digital, don't have to drag 1000 cd's around with me and their cd keys anymore (granted I could e-mail the keys to myself or save them on my computer but meh, steam does that for me so why go through the extra hassle.

As for the whole "Digital providers could go out of business and you wouldn't be able to get your game anymore" argument, there are always torrents, so as long as you have a legit cd key your good to go.

In addition, yes steam could go out of business in 10 years or so, but in 10 years half the games I currently own won't work on the computer I have because the software and hardware on the system will have changed so much.
