I used to play Warzone 2100 for hours on end, loved the variety of weaponry and sheer range of options in both attack and defense. My personal favorites were the fully upgraded Lancer rockets and the robot dudes (can't remember what you call them!) with a single shot version of the same weapon. They were awesome.

Have been keeping an eye on the new development project based on the released source code, some interesting stuff coming out of there, but I don't really have the time to play it these days

Another awesome classic RTS game is Total Annihilation... if you like WZ2100 you will probably like TA too.

Who gives a shit about graphics as long as the game is fun to play? Also, for it's day, they graphics were pretty good. Go troll elsewhere.

This is the reason almost all recent EA games are heaps of steaming shit really, they just focus on fancy graphics and visual effects and completely forget to actually make a decent game to go with it.
