What do you mean it is not hard to agree? It's downright impossible because he is speaking nonsense... hence all the trollface in this thread.

Does anyone in this thread understand the definition of the word "exist?"

Something or the absence of that something is proof in and of itself that that something exists. A country exists because people recognize and respect its right to existence.

You can't say something doesn't exist because you don't like it. That's just random nonsensical gibberish.

Like what was said a few posts ago, there is a difference between heritage and nationality. You're heritage has absolutely nothing to do with your nationality. Meaning you can be Chinese, Spanish, English, Indian, African, Japanese, Italian, German or whatever without it making any difference to which the country in which you live

A Chinese man living in America is a Chinese American and that is different from a Chinese man living in China who is a Chinese Chinaman. The difference being that the nationality of that person is different in that they live in different countries... and that is all there is to it. Their race and heritage have absolutely no influence on their nationality.
