I applaud the efforts and patience of Tiberian Technologies over the last few years. Despite the traumatic effects cheating has had on this community it is my hope that this will breathe some life back into a classic game.

The automatic download of fan maps was a great decision and the application of a built-in anti-cheat may rebuild my confidence in the integrity of this game. I am always pleased to see the persistence of those opposed to cheating. Well done!

If there is anything you need, please do not hesitate to ask.

PS> Any word from Electronic Arts on releasing this as an official patch?
