Indeed there is slightly less customization ability, but you still have just about all the control over the face as you did, which is debatably the most important area.

That's really good to know...thanks! Fully agree...the face is most important. Me and my sister are huge Oblivion fans and I made the chars for both of us and they have a 99% resemblance to our real faces lol!

It's incredible how much we can do once we get the hang of the sliders and what they control!

Hopefully we can do the same in Skyrim when we get to creating characters.
