Well, I noticed in a previous post either blazer or you mention Cisco about four times in reference to qualifications and experience in the development and deployment of Renguard.

since it is Network Basics :rolleyes:

program or configure Cisco Routers. I find it very odd they would employ an unlicensed Admin to maintain their network.

Its most likely what ive already said, blazer is just a system admin.

Does raise some questions as to the experience / Validity of the Renguard Team, due to inexperienced self-proclaimed leaders.

You may not be programming Renguard because of your lack of experience and skills, however you are, from what I have researched, the people behind the Renguard Project.
In essence, Crimson and Blazer are the owners of Renguard.com

If you say you work for Cisco, you should have Certifications to back them up. Just like you should have information to back up your claims of Renguard protecting the Renegade community! So far all I see is a lot of Hot air and no solid product as well as the vague information on the official site.

thx for the truthfull reply crimson
