If steam took my games off worst case I'd just go and pirate them (not much reason too, most of the games being released now aren't worth the space on my hard drive much less to care if steam go rid of it).

I know a lot of people that buy physical copies of the game and then turn around and get a torrent because the DRM on the game is too much for their system (never had the issue myself, 8 cores gives plenty of resources for some silly DRM to chew on if that's what it plans on doing).
