I checked the aiming assistance code and its all done via the camera, i.e. its got nothing to do with actual bullet or homing logic, it just looks like its improving the homing logic if you are the one doing the firing.

So no, that particular engine feature wont help get homing missiles to work better.

If there is a genuine legitimate regression in the homing missile logic vs stock renegade we can look into it (as regressions vs stock are important to us), also we can dig deeper into the bullet code post-4.0 maybe and see how homing works and try to improve it.
