As I was saying before my computer decided to restart (it was like a blue screen but it decided not to display the blue screen...) That looks like what happens when there are too many polys on the screen (seen it on my laptop a few times and on my main computer once back when we were working on Rp2's power up system and it keep spawning power ups infinitely). The only thing that doesn't match that is that the issue appears to continue no matter where you look; normally it disappears for me when you look away from the point with too many polys.
