It'll generally copy the default data\keys.cfg from the install directory to the documents folder location if one doesn't already exist in the documents folder. Of course, if you don't have one in the data folder either then it has nothing to copy... but that might explain why the installer looks like it doesn't add it, if it is actually putting it in the data folder (it would be added to the documents folder the first time you edited them using the ingame editor)
