It's especially weird for me because i've always been a fast paced player in the other CoDs, where it was definitely a lot slower paced than AW. The only thing that really appeals to me about AW is that it seems like there are a whole lot less fucking campers.

I've tried every CS ever made, and i've been complete and total shit at every one. I can't comprehend how to aim properly, even after watching newb guides. Beyond that, I definitely understand the appeal, especially of CS:GO which has just been getting bigger and bigger [competitively] as time goes on.

This is really the only reason why I play CoD, everyone just seems to be shit.

I've always wanted to try out Titanfall, but it seems to be too much of a casual game for me. I haven't heard anything good about it outside this forum, and the only attractive thing to me is that the developing studio behind it is made up of old Infinity Ward developers, which was/is my favorite studio behind CoD.
