it's too late for people and ourselves included to even want to acknowledge a distinct ruler and give up voting. We have been conditioned to see democracy as the best form of government and reject all others as authoritarian.

Here's the funny thing though; people rallying after certain popular "candidates" in the democracies of 2016 is exactly the same as ancient people rallying to see their kings crowned. The Leader Principle shows itself everytime: an incapable mass of people want a strongman to fix all their problems, put a chicken on every plate, and tuck em' to bed at night, and guard the gates. Might as well vote for the very last time, remove term limits, and go party at the beach. The king takes care of all the "important stuff."

eh?
