look I really dont know anything about business, but I think if you work hard and make enough money, with loans, to support the creation of a very good game, and then support it you'll get good proffit. You wont get good return at first, but once people know your reputation I think things will change. Look at Blizzard every game they make is so good they get more and more returning customers for every new game they make.

They are handing out free demo disks at the movie with food order, because they know people who play their product might like it and will go out and buy it, but thats not all. They will invest in future products because they know the reputation of the company.
