Nodbuggerum the m16 was put into service in 1964. But was ready for service in 1955.

The M16 was first put into service in 1968. The very first tests of this new weapon was done in the beginning of 1958. You go by when they first started using it, not when they invented the damn thing.

A few years before what? You provided two years (which were wrong).

Red Alert took place between the 40s and 50s, at least 10-15 years or so before the M16 was first put into service.

Quote:There is no m16 variant with auto and 3 round burst. Its a total waste of ammo. Either single and auto or single and 3 round burst. With this gun and the game id go with auto and single.

Yes there is... The Renegade Alert variant. It was already decided that the M16 that we'll include will have auto and 3 round burst.

Quote:and they didnt widely issue the 30 round magazine. The xm117 and carbine versions of the m16 used by special ops had 30 round magazines. They just never gave them to anyone using the m16a1.

"At the same time (circa 1970) the new 30 rounds magazines were introduced into service instead of the original 20 rounds ones, to equal Soviet and Chinese AK-47 assault rifles, which had 30-rounds magazines from the very beginning." - <http://world.guns.ru/assault/as18-e.htm>
