I believe in an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth...so he should die. But it seems that he would like that, and because of that...I think that the cruel and unusual punishment should be an option...poll the victims' family & friends. If they vote to torture him...don't kill him but keep him alive. Have like 2-3 hours a day of torture...if he gets too sickly...give him time to heal...then continue the torture. It's mean...but hey...he didn't want to die. Continue this until he goes looney...then throw him into a mental hospital. I can see that many think that this is a grotesque way of going about this...and some of you agree completely with me.

If you don't like that idea but believe in that idea of eye for eye, tooth for tooth...think of it this way:

Maybe the true victims are not the deceased but their families and friends. Their pain continues...and the guy does not feel any remorse...so in order to make him feel pain...physical harm is done. Maybe the idea of continuous torture until mental illness is too much...maybe the torture could stop when the true victims stop feeling pain...but then again...does the pain really ever stop?
