I really doubt this has anything to do with the Windows Narrator. Though i'm not sure, the windows XP narrator is "narrator.exe".

I've already been through all the accessibility options and nothing is unusual. I've also been in the add/remove screen and removed some shite that my dad had installed.

I've told him like 100 times NOT to install stuff from the internet, but there were plenty of dialers and crap like that. Also those "oooh flashing cursors and smilies" things. :rolleyes:

Anyway, after removing plenty of software the problem is still there. I'll check again in the morning, as the computer is upstairs where they're sleeping right now.
