I have .Net installed since the first public beta of MS Visual Studio.Net and keep it up to date. It seems people just haven't realized that .Net will become the kernel for the upcoming Windows versions. That's it, MS will make Windows itself .Net dependant. As an example, look at the new managed version of DirectX 9.0b. It's totally .Net framework driven.

Hey people!!! Move your asses and download it!!! It's smaller than many crappy game demos you download in a daily basis.
