1. People are born gay, and even if by some people it happens due to their childhood, it's still not their fault and not wrong.

2. Homosexuality happens in nature. Animals can be gay too. Therefore it's natural and not wrong.

3. I find it quite arrogant that some people claim to know who god loves and who he doesn't love. Even more that they seem to know god's motives.

4. I can understand why someone would be pro-war. I understand why people support Bush. I understand why people support many right-wing points of view. But why people oppose homosexuality is completely beyond me. To me it's like opposing rain or saying grass should be blue and green grass is wrong. I fail to comprehend it.

5. With "homosexuality" I generally refer to people who feel sexually attracted to members of their own sex. Having sex with them is a logical consequence to me.
