Women drivers :rolleyes:

I have a short story

One morning I woke up to see the back end a Ford Explorer sticking out of a ditch across the street from my house. The strange thing was it had gone off the left side of the road. It turns out a girl in my grade at school had put it there. The story she was coming by my house and decided to pass the car in front of her. Then they approach the hill which I have come to hate because of the accidents that end up happening in from of my house. So she decides that she will pass about the time she gets to the hill. Well, as luck would have it, another vehicle came over the hill coming from the other direction. The girl tried to accelerate even more to pass the car before coliding. At the point when she realized she wouldn't make it through she turned abruptly to the left and ended up in the ditch. She's lucky to be alive.

Also, she nearly hit me one day as I was leaving school.
