kriegervWhy there is a pope then?

And have you never heard of "Karel the Great".

To answer the first:

The Pope is a Catholic religious figurehead. Catholicism is not Christianity. There are severe differences between the two. One as such, is the sacrament of reconciliation (or confession). Confession is administered by a priest in a closed setting where the individual cites off sins he or she has committed in hoped of being forgiven. This is a blasphemy in Christianity. Only the blood of Christ can redeem someone from sin (according to Christianity), not a mere human who preaches the word of God.

To answer the second: No. I haven't.
