Well, if Cpo64's statement wasn't obvious enough, let me try and make it simpler...

Timmy is building himself a potato gun. He has three main parts he needs to finish. First, he needs to cut the pipes down to size and glue them together. Second, he needs to file an edge on one of the pipes so the potatoe will be cut into an airtight plug when it is shoved down the barrel. Thirdly, he needs to drill a hole in an end cap and attach a sparker. Timmy has two friends who would gladly help him build his potatoe gun. Should he:

A) Blow off his friends and make all the parts himself, wasting his whole afternoon so he can say that he did the whole thing himself and not have to share credit with anyone.

-OR-

B) Let his friends help him, and each of them does one task, so they build the cannon very quickly and get to shoot potatoes all afternoon, and inspire cooperation elsewhere in the neighbourhood, and eventually the whole neighbourhood gets together and builds an enormous tree house that takes up four trees and has six seperate rooms.

Now, lets think about which option looks more appealing....

If you can't get this.....wow.....
