Have you actually read his stuff?? A lot of it is good old fashioned common sense.

Right from the home page he has a quote from him basically saying that if he denies allegations made about him, he must be lying, but if Kerry denies having that affair with an intern, it's OK and we believe him. Interesting double standards.

I'm not sitting here and saying the Rush is god and he's absolutely correct in everything. Yes, he's a bit radical and exaggerates a bit, but I don't take his words as gospel truth, but use them as a basis for what I believe to be true.

And he doesn't say "liberals are bad just because". He's got plenty of data to back that up. What he says makes a lot more sense than the wild accusations made by the desperate Democrats trying to pull themselves out of being the minority party... just don't forget that there's a REASON they are now the minority party. There are things that they said, did, or want to do that has brought this upon them.
