

---

Subject: Scary Stuff

Posted by NHJ BV on Fri, 19 Mar 2004 11:32:59 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

There's quite still some oil in what's-it-called-in-english, I think tarsands. At the moment, however, its quite expensive to refine, but as the prices will rise there's still enough there for several decennia. Then there's coal: enough for a few centuries. Renewable energy sources aren't by far developed enough to take over the role of fossil fuels anytime soon.

I don't think any of us will see the end of fossil fuels and the complete takeover of renewable energy.

---