Hmm. SATA hard drives should be better than standard ones, since they're more expensive. Do you happen to know the RPM speed of your new hard drive?

Let me get this straight. A new hard drive slowed the loading times a bit, then a reinstall of XP slowed them down mega. If you're new hard drive has a slower speed, that would probably affect performance. But a reinstall.. maybe you had a faulty install of XP. The only thing I could possibly suggest is you format your drive and reinstall XP. But wait and see if anyone can come up with something else..
