

---

Subject: The Passion of the Christ

Posted by DarkDemin on Sun, 28 Mar 2004 07:45:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

The pope is infallible means "The pope cannot be wrong on teachings of the church" NOT and I repeat NOT on politics or other views he is still human and that was vatican two smacktard

ALSO, it was not water he was given it was GALL a terrible smelling awful form of alcohol.

There is one thing I do not agree with in the Catholic Religion and that is going to a priest to confess my sins. Why in the world would I have to go tell a priest that I screwed up... When God is supposed to be listening to me all the time...

"I/We believe the Communion of Saints..."

Just because the Pope makes someone a saint that does not mean they are the only saints. Who says the "people" in heaven can't intercede to God for us. I mean who has been there and been back to tell us about it. Also who is to say the bible is not flawed. For hundreds of years the bible was passed down generation to generation and have you ever played the game telephone. You know how messed up the message gets after going across the room through all those people. Think about it...

---