Tom Daschle! don't know that anyone in this country could view what we've seen so far as a diplomatic success, [I am] saddened that this president failed so miserably at diplomacy that we're now forced to war.

This makes me SICK. How can this mental midget shove this line down our throats and expect us to believe that the president is to blame for the failure of diplomacy to be effective in disarming Saddam Hussein? It's absolutely ludicrous. You have to love the delivery as well. The first line is a truth that you can't dispute. He is right that this was not a diplomatic success. Then, once he's got you lulled into thinking he tells the truth, he goes and blames it on Bush. Nevermind the fact that Hussein is a heartless monster. You can't reason with a madman and this failure of diplomacy proves it. Now, we have to speak in his language, the only one he understands.

Now, Mr. Daschle, how long has this conflict been going on? Oh, at least 12 years, back when Bush, Sr. was in office. And who was in office for 8 of those 12 years? Oh, that's right, your man, Clinton... who didn't do a damn thing when Saddam made the inspectors leave...
