CrimsonIt's not really a matter of trust with Scrumfy. He dislikes me and consequently distrusts me. He is an isolated incident. I have never demanded or expected trust or respect but I appreciate when it's given, and to that end, I really appreciate those of you who do trust me and the RenGuard team (remember that mac leads that team, I'm just the web developer).

And yes, if someone posts how to get around RenGuard, we move it to a private forum for exploration. Anyone who gives a damn about Renegade would tell us if they got around it. We have only confirmed a couple exploits and most of them have been resolved on the server side without having to change the client, but you can expect another client upgrade within the next couple of days.

It is my professional opinion that if you get around Renguard and don't tell us privately about it, that you have a desire to see Renegade die and probably like to cheat. Interestingly enough, Scrumfy created a couple of the cheats the RenGuard was designed to block.

Now you're just as bad as Ty. He put your names on cheats you (probably) didn't create, and now you're affording me the same misrepresentation. I showed Blazer the cheats, back when I liked your network. And you, of course, had to be involved...Again proudly displaying your controlling nature. I thought you had learned to not speak of things which you know nothing about...Apparently not.

EDIT: Let's not forget about the bighead models you DCC'd to me, and let's try to tell the truth. We were all testing cheats, not using them to ruin people's games. Except for you "testing" them in public servers.
