pvtschlagdid u not read my post completly as i said that they have the permission to do that mean they have some reason of going in after them, such as if osama bin ladaen bought a house in florida and the gov found out about it they would just knock on the door and ask him to surrender because they know the threat he is. and that is the same here you are a threat. wanna try saying something that makes sence now?

You're one to talk about making sense. Seems someone skipped English class one too many times. And yes, legally, they would have to knock on his door; if they were to knock down the door without a warrant, or notification to the occupants, then Osama could potentially be freed in a court of law. Illegal searches and shootings don't hold up too well.
