Thanks Crimson,

Hmm, the only other thing that has changed is that I had to re-install Renegade as I had a major crash and had to reload Windows XP Pro again on top of the existing system. I was pretty careful about using my standard keystrokes BUT it is possible that I did not clean out all the other options in the second key binding column. Initially long long ago when I first got Renegade I had a similar problem with bindings not working and I cleaned out everything non-essential in the second Control bindings column. If it was not caused by RenGuard then that is the only other potential problem cause that I can think of.

I do like RenGuard and would like to thank you guys for working so hard to make it work!

I have found that it is a bit of a pain to unload it when you change servers but was pleased to see in another thread that you are looking at a popup screen when you exit Renegade.

Question: If I were to save a copy of the Game.exe for Renguard and then rename the second one back to Game.exe would I be OK running in a "Non-Renguard" environment? The reason that I ask is that I am planning a LAN Party at the end of May and plan to have between 24 and 30 participants and am not sure if we can run Renegade on my server (with RenGuard installed) without having all the players running RenGuard. We CAN have the internet access open but my preference is to have it shut off as sometimes people get lost surfing when I would prefer them all to be gaming. I am presuming that the RenGuard that I installed for my gaming use is the same version that I would need on the LAN Server. (A differernt machine - my laptop - running as a dedicated Renegade server.)

Thanks again!
