Aircraftkiller is right, the the "From" field has been forged. I remember when I got emails claiming to be from Dante and that "s8muk" (however you spell his name) guy during that huge virus outbreak.

The attached file is a text file. It was not originally in the email. You see, when someone has Norton Antivirus set to detect his or her email, it deletes any malicious attachment and replaces it with a message saying the file was deleted. That also explains the German message. It's saying, "Norton Antivirus deleted the file: pass-message.pif It was infected with the virus W32.Sober.F@mm."
