This silly canard began its Internet life in May 2002.

this question was not authored by a "famous American psychologist," nor does it come from "a genuine psychological test." Believe not everything that turns up in e-mail, especially items sorely vague about their bona fides.

Dude im English and i never claimed it was written by a famous american psychologist. My mum had that question on her social and educational paper for her o' levels when she was in school (long time ago) she answered same as xpetx did and her teacher told her she was crazy and then gave her the more common answer above that i gave myself...funny though unless you are calling my mum a 44 yr old liar (i doubt you were born then) then my answer held ground obviously.

We answer by what we know and that is what i know, hence the reason i answered that way. im not saying your right im right everybody is right....its a question that holds no wrong answer really, because if you arent the woman who killed her sister then you cant know for sure and hence cant answer for sure either.
