Kytten9Last but not least...if the bible is the word of god before all time, and states that he made the world in 6 days, rested on the 7th and the first 2 creatures he created were Man (adam) and woman (eve) and yet we have proven dinosaurs came before man or woman, why are they not mentioned in the bible?

Word of God before all time? I know that Timothy 3;16 says all scripture is given by inspiration of God, but where does it say that? I'm not being critical, just interested. If you're assumed that under the assumption of predestination, I'd recommend that you order the class, "Predestination and the Freedom of Will," which can be found here.

As for the dinosaurs, there is some interest in that some of the Hebrew words of Genesis 1:2, "tohu va bohu." What's the commotion about? Well, the word "was" changes to "became:"

bigejoe14To start off, the Bible was written by several prophets. Not just one confused person. But since you seem to think that Christianity is "confusing" then it would be several confused people in your case.

Very true. The books contained in the Bible run from circa 1050 B.C. (Genesis) to 100 A.D. (Revelation). This time frame may be stretched further if the Book of Enoch is legitimate.

Speaking of which, they are many books that are supposedly scripture, but are not in the canonical texts. There are some references to such books like the Book of the Wars of the Lord or Book of Jasher.

More stuff about books not in the canonical Bible: <http://www.sacred-texts.com/chr/apo/index.htm>

Sorry about hijacking your topic, Gunny. I'm just sick and tired of people like xptek who always bring up crap. I for one am tired of "putting up" with people like him dissing God, Jesus, scripture, and so on. It's time my generation listened to God, before they cause more chaos and lies in this world.

God bless
