EEK! GunRun, why didn't you tell me about this topic?

Before I start, here's to all you retards who have to revolt against some one just because their of a different religion: If you living like there is no god you better be right.

Any way, this is one of the few topics of don't have much solid information on, mostly because no one does, here is my explanation:

I don't want to go into this, but any one who is religious would know stories about super natural things within their religion; angels and resurrections are examples. Most current religions were formed by an angel telling a person something and in turn, that person spreading it around. I'll get back to this in a bit, after you read all of this it will come together.

A Very long time ago large pools of water (soon to be oceans) life appeared and evolved at an alarming rate. Scientists are still puzzled on how it got there but it just seemed to start. Earth could actually have been seeded by an advanced alien race, or as an experiment. Or the organic compounds just formed by themselves.

Now to the Mayans, there is strong evidence of their interaction with extraterrestrial life, or they were just really smart: A small stone model of an air plane was found in a temple that was thought to be sealed for thousands of years. If you fly over the desert there you will see huge "runways" in the ground, so big you wouldn't notice it on the ground, just a small drop while walking. The Egyptians actually have records of activities that would be alien to us.

Now, on to the 2012 thing, it could very well be true. Now if you didn't put it together already, what I've been saying is that God, or any other god for that matter, angels, and other things like that are aliens who have been watching over us for thousands of years. If you still think this is bullshit, there are documents, and other things showing the probable of existence of aliens who are observing us. Like a recording from an Apollo mission that described what an astronaut was seeing over on the other side of a creator. If any one remembers the story of , it was a city that was destroyed, and a man and his family were told they could leave before it was destroyed because they were the only good ones, but they could not turn around and look back or they would be turned into a pillar of salt, here is the scientific explanation: Aliens destroyed the city to show something, most likely what happens when your a bad little human, but the thing that makes the story special is the pillar of salt thing. Certain energies and materials mixed together are actually capital of turning some organic substances onto a salt compound. This would make a connection with a nuclear weapon, extremely advanced of course. The aliens did not want them to see what was going on, most likely to keep the man thinking it was god condemning the city. Then you have mosses, the top of mount Sinai or how ever you spell it, there was a storm going on, mosses might have been aboard a ship, being instructed on what to do. These are just accuracies were aliens tried to steer humans in a direction they wanted.

What I'm getting at is that is fully possible that it could happen, but when was the last time people were major steered by acts of god? A very long time ago. This could point to a cancellation of them showing us themselves, or postponement. They know that we will probably react with force other than try to learn about them.
