Depending on the content of your site, its almost always possible to find someone willing to provide free hosting. Anything with under 10-15 mb of files, which is most sites these days, can get hosted somewhere. My recommendation would be find a forum of discussion about whatever the topic of your site is, and ask for hosting there after describing your experience in webdesign and anything related to your topic. I've probably gotten as good a service as I could pay for, maybe better, for Starwars Mod, and I've never paid a cent, nor have I had ads or popups on my site.
